

The Investment Thesis — Premier Product

The Premier Product is built around the acquisition of multifamily real estate — specifically apartment communities — targeting purchases at discounts to fair market value and below replacement cost. We will be acquiring assets now, in the current market, through relationships the founding team has spent decades building.

This distinction matters. Our edge is not a fund structure or a proprietary algorithm. It is access — relationships with distressed owners, overleveraged operators, and motivated sellers who call our founders directly because of decades of trust. These acquisitions do not reach brokers or the open market.

What we acquire — and why now

Multifamily real estate — apartment communities throughout the US in 10 markets that we have bought, operated, or sold — acquired below market value from motivated sellers who cannot refinance, cannot find institutional buyers, and need to close.

The conditions that make this possible are specific to this moment. Banks have tightened lending standards significantly since 2023. Regional and community banks — which have historically funded the majority of multifamily transactions — have largely stepped back. Owners who leveraged aggressively in 2020–2022 cannot refinance at current rates. The result is a motivated seller environment that experienced operators have not seen since 2010.

Why this window will not last

The Federal Reserve has signaled that meaningful normalization of commercial real estate lending standards is unlikely before 2027. That is the window. Once banks re-enter the market, institutional capital will return, competition will increase, and below-market acquisition prices will compress. The Premier Product is designed to move through this window now, while it is open.

“The distress in commercial real estate is real, it is ongoing, and it is creating opportunities that experienced operators have not seen since 2010.”

Morgan Stanley Real Estate Research, October 2024

“Regional banks, the traditional backbone of multifamily lending, have significantly tightened underwriting standards and we do not anticipate a return to prior lending levels before 2027.”

Federal Reserve Financial Stability Report, November 2024

“Distressed and troubled commercial real estate loans reached $94 billion in 2024, with multifamily representing the fastest-growing segment.”
